PELTIER WINERY

A DESSERT WINE YOU CAN PLUG-IN TO

Beginning March 10, 2006 wineries seeking label approval in the United States were not allowed to use specific descriptions and geographical designations. A few names that are not authorized for use on wines originating in the United States seeking label approval include: Burgundy, Champagne, and Port. In 2008 we were ready to release our “dessert wine,” and were confronted with this problem. What to call a “Port” style wine if you are not permitted to use the word Port on the label? So naturally a USB Port that is used by billions of people daily was our answer, thus the birth of USB _ (You get the idea)..

Complex flavors of butterscotch and dried cherry aromas, supported by an orange peel splash on the mid-pallet, blended together to form the perfect balance and modestly sweet, long lasting finished.
